RE: INVENTORY OF LOCAL BUSINESSES

Dear Mr. Dodge:

Phase I of the business retention and expansion project to establish a current inventory of commercial and industrial businesses within the City of Pacific has been completed.

The following report describes the process for data collection, outlines a business retention and expansion strategy for proceeding with Phase II of the project, and preliminarily identifies business events where city leadership can interact with local businesses.

The complete 'Inventory of Local Businesses' is attached to the report as Appendix A.

Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at any time.

Very Sincerely,

DAVID K. TOYER
FOUNDER

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Overview

The City of Pacific, with the assistance of a grant from the Port of Seattle, retained Toyer Strategic Consulting, LLC. to complete a business retention and expansion project with three main objectives:

1. Inventory all commercial and industrial businesses in the City, including SIC and NAICS classifications (Phase I)
2. Identify business and other events where city leaders could interact with local businesses (Phase I)
3. Make contact, directly or indirectly, with each business inventoried (Phase II)

Inventory of Businesses

Toyer Strategic Consulting identified businesses using three sources of data: InfoUSA, ESRI and current city business licenses. This data was review, refined and merged into a single inventory of 310 businesses.

The inventory of businesses includes the following minimum information for each business:

- Name
- Local Address
- Phone Number
- SIC and NAICS code

In some cases, additional business information was identified by data sources and/or through the data verification process:

- Business Website
- Main Business Contact & Title
- Email Address
- Number of Employees
- Estimate of Gross Sales

Industry Concentrations

Phase I's business inventory identified Pacific's top five (5) industry concentrations as:

- Construction – 21%
- Retail Trade – 17%
- Wholesale Trade – 11%
- Other Services – 10%
- Transportation and Warehousing – 9%

Strategy for Business Retention & Expansion Visits

Phase II business retention and expansion (BRE) calls will come from a list of businesses derived from the following factors:

1. Employers identified in Phase I as having 50 or more employees
2. Top five (5) employers based on Phase I identified gross sales estimates

Additionally, visits will be prioritized in order to focus on the following industry segments: manufacturing; transportation and warehousing; construction; and wholesale trade.

I. PROJECT DESCRIPTION

Utilizing a grant from the Port of Seattle, the City of Pacific contracted Toyer Strategic Consulting to complete a business retention and expansion project with three main objectives:

1. Inventory all commercial and industrial businesses in the City, including SIC and NAICS classifications.
2. Identify business and other events where City leaders can interact with local businesses
3. Contact, directly or indirectly, the businesses in the City of Pacific.

II. SCOPE OF WORK OVERVIEW

To accomplish the project objectives, Toyer Strategic Consulting proposed a scope of work in two phases:

Phase I: Inventory

- ✓ Create a current inventory of all commercial and industrial businesses in the City of Pacific, including (at a minimum) the business name, address, phone number and SIC or NAICS classification.
- ✓ Develop a strategy for business retention and expansion visits with top employers and/or key local industries.
- ✓ Identify business and other networking events where attendance by an official of the City would support business retention and expansion efforts

Phase II: Assessment

- ✓ Meet with a minimum of twelve (12) local businesses to gather additional data in support of business retention and expansion opportunities
- ✓ Contact every local business through a two-part direct mail campaign, seeking participation in a business retention and expansion (BRE) survey that collects data to support future BRE outreach to local businesses
- ✓ Produce a final report outlining the results of this project, including recommendations for future business retention and expansion efforts.

This report details the Phase I activity of the project.

III. INVENTORY OF BUSINESSES

A. PROJECT CHALLENGES

Prior to initiating an inventory of businesses, it's important to identify challenges that limit the efficacy of an inventory of businesses. These challenges include:

1. The data for businesses sourced from data service companies can be incomplete or inaccurate due to the age of the information and/or the proprietary collection methods used by each data service company. As such, no single-source of data is likely to identify all businesses in the city.
2. Self-employed persons (who are counted in the Economic Census as firms/businesses) are highly likely to be under or uncounted as they typically do not register as a business entity or obtain local business licenses.
3. Some businesses are branches or divisions of larger companies with or without the same name. This situation can result in multiple/duplicative entries at the same location.
4. Businesses can be renting or leasing a location from a separate, unaffiliated business that is the owner of the real estate. Often the business is counted, but the owner or manager of the real estate is not.
5. While the 2012 Economic Census can be used as a benchmark for identifying the potential universe of businesses in the city, it is based on sampling and individual business level data is unavailable.

B. INVENTORY RESULTS

Phase I inventoried a total of 310 businesses inside the corporate limits of Pacific.

C. THE 2012 ECONOMIC CENSUS AS A BENCHMARK

The U.S. Census Bureau conducts the Survey of Business Owners and Self-Employed Persons (SBO) every five years. The most recent data available for public review was collected in 2012 and published as part of the Economic Census in December of 2015.

As shown in the following table the Economic Census estimates there were 516 business located in Pacific in 2012.

	Total
Total Firms	516
With employees	137
Without employees	369

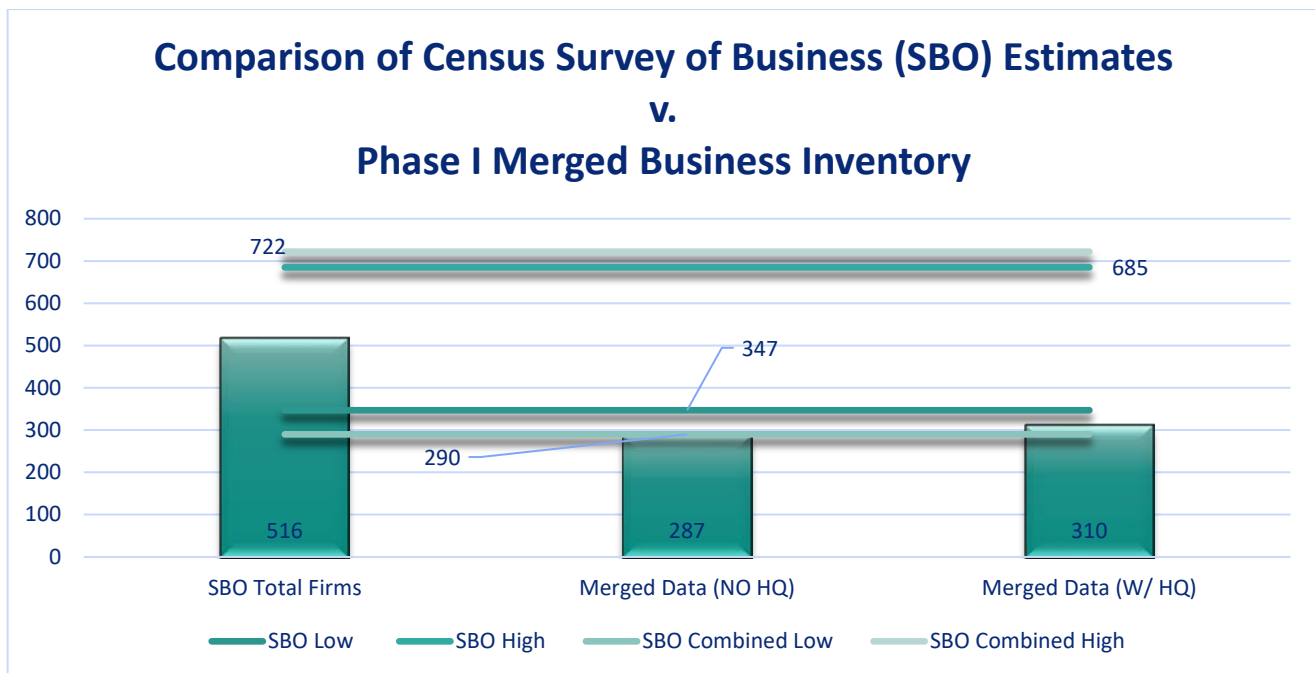

Because these estimates are derived from a survey sample, they are subject to both sampling and non-sampling errors. To account for this, the Economic Census uses the sample estimate and an estimate of its relative standard error to “construct interval estimates with a prescribed level of confidence that the interval includes the average results of all samples.”

The following table is an expression of the 90% confidence interval (CI) for the estimate used in the Economic Census:

	Total	RSE	90% CI	Bounds (+/-)	Low Bound	High Bound
Total Firms	516	20.50%	1.6	169.248	347	685
With employees	137	28.30%	1.6	62.0336	75	199
Without employees	369	26.10%	1.6	154.0944	215	523

In sum, there is 90% confidence that the total number of firms (those with and without employees) falls somewhere between 347 and 685. And if the 90% confidence intervals for the respective low and high bounds for firms with and firms without employees are totaled, the range grows to between 290 and 722.

The following graphic displays a comparison between the Census Survey of Business (SBO) estimates, 90% confidence intervals and the total number of inventoried businesses in Phase I (with and without headquarters included).

With a total of 310 inventoried business, Phase I produced a result consistent with the low bounds of the Census SBO 90% confidence interval. This is a positive sign, considering the Phase I inventory (much like other similar efforts) is highly likely to undercount the total number of businesses within Pacific. Why? Primarily this traces back to the growth in “firms” (sole proprietorships) without employees, including those individuals commonly referred to as the 1099 economy (e.g. freelance professionals, independent contractors) that have not organized as an entity even though they may use a ‘fictitious’ trade name. Because these individuals are generally indistinguishable from a person, have no website and operate out of a residence, finding these individuals can prove difficult. Further, such businesses may not even be full-time endeavors.

D. SELECTED DATA SOURCES

The completed inventory of businesses in the City of Pacific was created using the following sources of data:

City Business Licenses. A database containing information on the 577 business currently holding a license with the City was obtained from the City Clerk. Pacific’s municipal code generally requires that all businesses generally conducting activity with the City obtain a business license (PMC Ch. 5.02.040); branches and rental properties must each have a separate license (PMC Ch. 50.02.070); and locations with multiple business (multiple UBIs) must have separate licenses for each business.

InfoUSA. InfoUSA maintains business databases for purchase by sales and marketing professionals. They obtain information on businesses from new business filings, utility connections, press releases, corporate websites, annual reports, yellow page directories and phone call verifications. Using the City’s zip code to define the search parameters, we generated and purchased a list of 168 identified business records.

ESRI. ESRI is the builder of ArcGIS and other spatial analysis tools. Together with Infogroup (a/k/a InfoUSA), they plot the locations of businesses spatially. We used the ESRI business locator tool to capture business location data from three overlapping 1.5 mile radius search areas that covered the city limits. This process identified 242 businesses.

E. DATA REFINEMENT

Prior to merging data from each source, we refined each source’s individual data sets as follows:

City Business Licenses. We eliminated those businesses with no physical location within Pacific’s corporate limits after analyzing business addresses and filtering for those businesses that may have a PO BOX outside the city but a physical location within the city. This reduced the total number from 577 to 192 business.

InfoUSA. Using web searches, phone calls and business directories we reviewed each business on the list that provided a non-Pacific address to determine if they had a physical presence inside the city limits. Additionally, we eliminated those instances where government entities were listed as businesses. This nominally reduced the list.

ESRI. Using web searches, phone calls and business directories we reviewed each business on the list that provided a non-Pacific address to determine if they had a physical presence inside the city limits. Additionally, we eliminated those instances where government entities were listed as businesses. This eliminated 14 entries.

F. DATA MERGE & SECONDARY REFINEMENT

All three data sources were merged and cross verified to eliminate or combine duplicate entries. The following procedures were used to complete this secondary refinement after the merge.

Identifying Multiple Entries

After merging the three sources of data, multiple entries for business were evaluated to determine if they were duplicative or if they identified separate or distinct business units.

This process of identifying separate or distinct business units (including branches, divisions and headquarters) is important because it may require latter use of a separate business retention and expansion strategy. Branches or divisions may be evaluated for closure or expansion based on a multitude of factors ranging from local management to the location’s overall relationship to a larger corporate strategy. And in some corporate structures local management must decide to pursue new product lines and may need to compete against other plant locations that produce similar products.

Further circumstances can exist where a corporate headquarters may be quietly considering the sale of a local business unit or contemplating the relocation or consolidation of other business units to a single location where they have an established footprint. Even though each branch, division or headquarters is the same company, these scenarios highlight why each requires differentiation in the business retention and expansions strategies that may be employed.

Procedure for Reconciling Multiple Entries

To evaluate multiple entries, we used the following procedures:

1. Where sufficient information was available (especially business license data) individual branches, divisions, and their headquarters were counted as separate entries.
2. Multiple businesses using the same address (with or without the same owner) were counted separately when information on the business type (SIC, NAICS, website information, etc.) indicated a difference in the type of business or identified business sector.
3. Business entries using the same address were filtered for minor differences. For example, one source may have listed the business as "The Upholstery Zone" and another source as "Upholstery Zone."
4. Duplicative business entities were combined into single entries as follows:
 - a. When multiple business listings gathered from the data sources were clearly the same business.
 - b. In situations where a business entity was identified as using a 'doing business as' (d/b/a) name and where the d/b/a was not established as a separate entity.

Government and Institutional Entities

Local government offices such as police, fire, schools and city offices were excluded as they are non-income producing entities and they are located within the community based on the public need for services.

Churches, foundations and charitable organizations were included¹. While they are non-profit or not-for-profit, they often have employees, make investments in the community and serve as a source of volunteers. Further, they are semi-mobile and as they can grow or shrink through expanding existing locations and/or adding or eliminating secondary locations. While they wouldn't necessarily be high priorities for a business retention and expansion program, they are classified as businesses for purposes of an inventory. However, in the case of Pacific, this only applied to churches.

Institutions like universities, colleges and community colleges (including branch campuses) would have been included in the results based on their employment, relationship to workforce development and potential for expansion or contraction. None were identified in Pacific's inventory.

State and federal government offices were counted in this type of inventory because they are often major employers and can be an asset that attracts business investment. For example, military installations and USDA rural development offices can attract defense contractors/manufacturers and agri-business (crop insurance, banking, etc.) to locations nearby.

Single Source Data

In reviewing the information obtained from all three data sources, 120 businesses were specifically identified by only a single data source. These were tallied for each source used and are as follows:

InfoUSA Only	10
ESRI Only	41
Business License Only	69

G. DATA VERIFICATION

After all business data was merged and refined, a two-step verification process was employed to further confirm the results.

The first step involved a series of internet searches to locate and confirm phone numbers and address, as well as identify business contacts. Information from sources such as the Yellow Pages (online), Dun and Bradstreet, Home Advisor, Angie's List and etc. were consulted. Further, in a limited number of cases where no information was found for the business names listed in the data sources, keywords were used to identify if those businesses were d/b/a under a different name².

The second step involved calling businesses not retrieved from the city business license data to improve the accuracy of the business information (such as addresses and phone numbers). When phone numbers were determined to be out of service and/or incorrect, attempts were made to determine whether an alternative phone number existed.

In Phase I none of these businesses with invalid phone numbers were eliminated pending completion of the direct mail survey and an attempt to physically confirm their presence (both of which will be completed in Phase II).

All business information obtained for the Phase I inventory will be updated after completion of the Phase II surveys and BRE calls. A final inventory will be presented with the final report.

H. IDENTIFICATION OF SIC & NAICS CODES

NAICS codes are used by federal statistical agencies to classify businesses for the purpose of data collection and analysis. These codes are commonly used by economic development organizations (EDOs) to analyze a community's existing industry concentrations (clusters) and identify target industries for future business attraction efforts. Similarly, SIC codes are used by OSHA and other countries to similarly classify industry data.

Nearly 80% of the businesses inventoried had a SIC and/or NAICS code previously identified. In cases where SIC codes were identified, a SIC to NAICS 'crosswalk' was used to identify the corresponding NAICS code. Likewise, where NAICS codes were identified, a NAICS to SIC 'crosswalk' was used to identify the corresponding SIC code.

Approximately 19% of the businesses inventoried had neither a SIC or NAICS code identified. Efforts to populate these codes for all entries were made using SIC and NAICS classification searches by business (name and location searches), as well as reviewing individual business information (e.g. service listings and qualifications on websites, etc.) to establish the characteristics of the business such that SIC and NAICS codes could be appropriately assigned.

A total of six (6) businesses inventoried (less than 1%) were not able to be classified at this time.

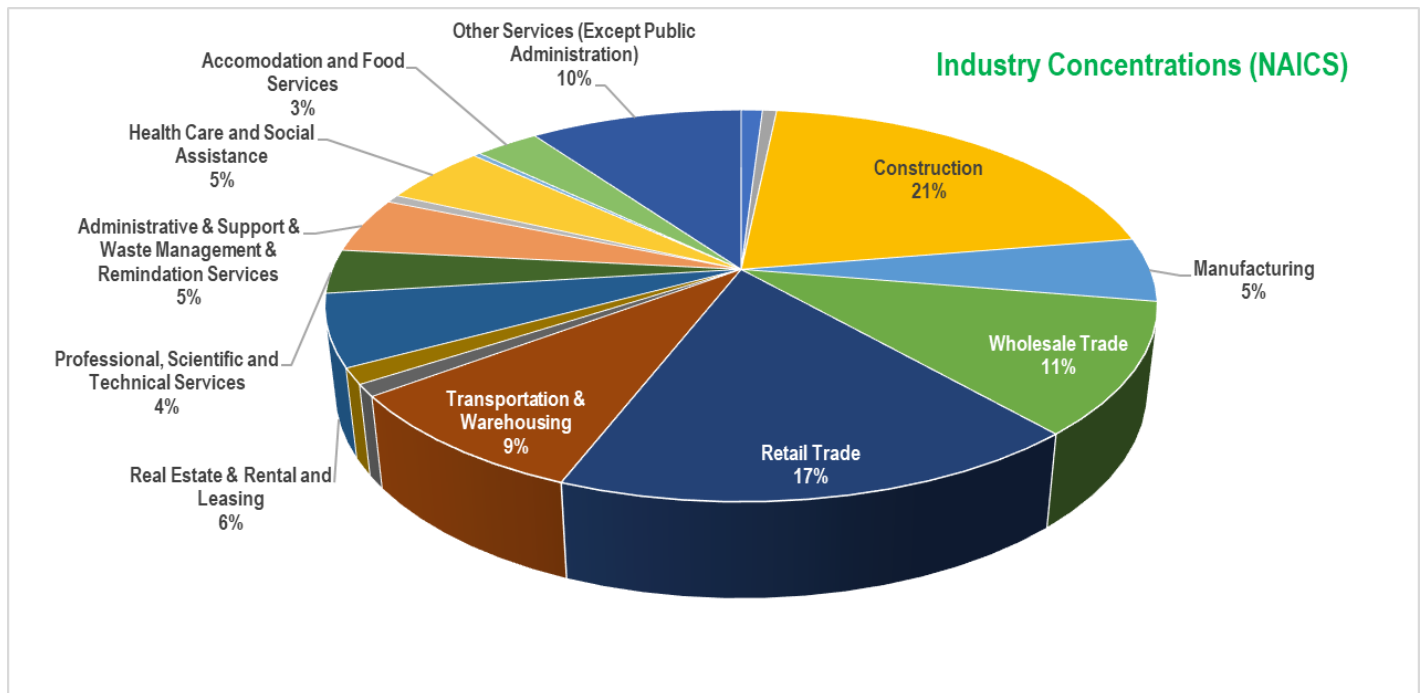

I. INDUSTRY CONCENTRATIONS

Based on a review of the NAICS classifications, the City's TOP TEN (non-government) industry segments are:

- Construction – 21%
- Retail Trade – 17%
- Wholesale Trade – 11%
- Other Services – 10%
- Transportation and Warehousing – 9%
- Real Estate & Leasing – 6%
- Manufacturing – 5%
- Health Care & Social Assistance – 5%
- Administrative Support & Waste Management Remediation – 5%

² To insure accuracy in cases where businesses may be using a d/b/a, verification of the same address, phone number, and contact information or business type was completed.

- Professional, Scientific and Technical Services – 4%

This graphic depicts the various industry concentrations for Pacific based on NAICS primary sector classifications.

J. STRATEGY FOR BUSINESS RETENTION & EXPANSION VISITS

Phase II of the project will involve completion of 12-15 business retention and expansion visits (BRE calls). Economic development organizations (EDOs) vary in their approach to BRE calls. Depending on their size, some visit only their top 10-20 employers, while others visit a certain percentage of businesses from their top industry clusters.

To complete Phase II of this project, our firm recommends attempting to complete BRE calls based on a list of businesses derived from the following factors:

1. Employers identified in Phase I as having 50 or more employees
2. Top five (5) employers based on Phase I identified gross sales estimates

Additionally, visits will be prioritized to focus on the following industry segments³:

- a. Manufacturing
- b. Transportation and Warehousing
- c. Construction
- d. Wholesale Trade

The list of business identified for potential BRE calls have been separately produced and are under review by the City and Port prior to Phase II being implemented.

³ This methodology was selected based on two key criteria. First, these industries are net importers of wealth to a community as they sell products and services beyond the City's corporate boundary. Second, the City's designated Manufacturing Industrial Center (MIC) would more than likely cater to and best support these types of uses as the area is developed.

K. BUSINESS EVENTS & NETWORKING OPPORTUNITIES

An initial search was conducted for local and regional business events where City participation would assist networking with businesses from Pacific and neighboring communities. The following are those we preliminarily identified:

1. Auburn Area Chamber of Commerce. This Chamber is the chamber for the Pacific area. They conduct local business events, luncheons and other networking opportunities.
2. Economic Development Board of Tacoma & Pierce County. This economic development organization holds events and helps market economic development opportunities, including specific sites. Participation with this organization and its members provides an opportunity for the City to discuss the City's subarea designated as a Manufacturing Industrial Center (MIC), which is primarily located within Pierce County.
3. Economic Development Council of Seattle & King County. This economic development organization holds events and helps market economic development opportunities, including specific sites. Participation in events for this organization and its members provides an opportunity to discuss the City's designated Manufacturing Industrial Center (MIC).
4. BisNow. The Seattle chapter holds frequent networking events, luncheons and discussion primarily geared toward business and economic development topics, especially real estate.

This list is not all-inclusive. The survey deployed in Phase II of this project will include questions specifically designed to identify additional opportunities. Further, business events will be a topic covered by the BRE calls.
